PRODUCT DESCRIPTION

This 19th-century Orientalist school oil painting depicts a camel caravan traveling along a coastal route, with riders and attendants moving in procession beside the sea toward a distant settlement. The camels—laden and guided on foot—form the compositional focus, emphasizing themes of travel, trade, and communal movement. Painted in a warm, atmospheric palette with fluid brushwork, the scene reflects 19th-century European interest in everyday life in Mediterranean or North African coastal regions. The work is unsigned and unframed. 33.5 x 17"H
