Antique Double-Tiered Tole-Painted Wrought Iron Plant Stand A charming antique two-tier wrought iron plant stand, hand-painted in the tole tradition, late 19th to early 20th century. This decorative stand features scrolling iron legs with delicate foliate accents, highlighted by original polychrome and gilt floral motifs. The upper circular holder is encircled by finely detailed painted panels of flowers and foliage, while the lower tier is accented with complementary floral motifs and gilt flourishes, providing both balance and elegance. The stand retains its original hand-painted finish with a timeworn patina that enhances its authentic antique character. Likely French or Italian in origin, this versatile piece was designed to hold two planters, making it ideal for displaying flowers or greenery in a conservatory, entryway, or garden-inspired interior.
