PRODUCT DESCRIPTION

This taxidermy specimen of the Blue Eared Pheasant presents a striking representation of this impressive avian species. This sizeable terrestrial bird boasts a stately gray plumage, complemented by an ornate, frilly tail that adds to its regal appearance. Its distinctive features include a vivid red face and strikingly upswept white facial plumes, often referred to as its "ears," setting it apart as a unique inhabitant of its range. This captivating bird can be encountered in diverse habitats, ranging from subalpine forests to high-altitude alpine zones, demonstrating adaptability in its quest for sustenance. Typically foraging in small, cautious groups throughout most of the year, the Blue Eared Pheasant forms pairs during the breeding season, adding a touch of elegance to its life cycle. Unfortunately, due to hunting pressures across its range, this magnificent creature has grown increasingly wary and tends to seek refuge in remote, untouched landscapes, far removed from human settlements.
