Taxidermy Blue-and-Yellow Macaw (Ara ararauna) The blue-and-yellow macaw, also known as the blue-and-gold macaw, is a stunning Neotropical parrot. This taxidermy specimen showcases its vibrant plumage: a mostly blue dorsum, a light yellow to orange venter, and gradient green hues atop its head. Belonging to the large group of neotropical parrots known as macaws, this bird is native to the tropical regions of Central and South America, including the island of Trinidad in the Caribbean. The blue-and-yellow macaw thrives in a variety of habitats such as forests (especially varzea), woodlands, and savannahs. Its popularity in aviculture can be attributed to its striking colors, impressive ability to mimic human speech, ease of availability, and strong bonding with humans. This taxidermy piece is a perfect representation of the beauty and elegance of these magnificent birds. Measures: 13" x 8" x 30"
