Swedish Pine Continental Clock with pendulum from the early 19th Century. This is a traditional floor clock that is commonly referred to as a Mora clock. It is made from pine wood, which is native to Sweden, and features a distinctive green-blue color with a gilded trim, which was a popular style during the early 19th century. The clock has a pendulum that swings back and forth to keep time, and it is designed to be placed on the floor, rather than hung on the wall. The clock is quite tall, measuring approximately 96 inches or 8 feet, which makes it a striking and impressive piece of furniture. The clock has a rectangular shape and measures approximately 13 inches wide by 15 inches deep. The face of the clock is painted with roman numerals and has two hands, one for the hours and one for the minutes. The clock also features a weight-driven mechanism that drives the pendulum and keeps the clock running. Overall, this Swedish Pine Continental Clock with pendulum is a beautiful and functional piece of furniture that reflects the craftsmanship and style of the early 19th century in Sweden. Measures approximately: 13" x 15" x 96".
