PRODUCT DESCRIPTION

Early 20th Century Gentleman's Shaving Stand with Tilting Mirror This elegant early 20th-century gentleman's shaving stand is crafted in turned hardwood, likely walnut or mahogany, and exemplifies refined Edwardian-era personal furniture. The oval tilting mirror is mounted on adjustable supports, allowing for precise positioning, while the central column features a small circular shelf for grooming implements. A shaped towel ring and horizontal bar provide functional convenience, reflecting the stand's original use in a well-appointed dressing room or bedroom. Raised on a tripod base with gently curved feet, the piece combines practical design with graceful proportions. A fine survivor of early modern domestic furnishings, offering both sculptural presence and historical charm. Measurements: 24" L x 16" W x 67" H
