PRODUCT DESCRIPTION

This beautifully preserved collection features four 19th century botanical herbarium specimens meticulously mounted in a rustic barn wood frame. Each specimen, carefully labeled with scientific details, highlights a distinct variety of flora, providing both a visual and educational glimpse into botanical history. The herbarium sheets are thoughtfully arranged, creating a balanced and harmonious display. The frame, crafted from reclaimed barn wood, adds a charming, weathered aesthetic, enhanced by hand-applied gilt accents on the inner edges and corners. These hand-gilt rosettes elevate the rustic simplicity of the wood with a touch of classic refinement. This juxtaposition of natural and refined elements makes this piece a captivating blend of organic beauty and historical artistry. Ideal for lovers of vintage botanical studies, this framed set would make a wonderful addition to any natural history collection, library, or a nature-inspired interior.
